Compound Interest

Has Earned More Than Speculation.

If you don't believe that compound interest has earned more money than speculation, you can see it by looking at the bank account of a man who has been saving money for years. The money has grown so much that it is now worth more than the original investment. This is the power of compound interest.

JOY RIDE AT 100.

Alert Outing by The Bulletin Representative.

One hundred years of age! Such is the record of one of the oldest residents of this town, Albert Blackmar, born June 12, 1812, who lives at his home in Foster, R. I., about ten miles east of here, to-day.

As sturdy and enduring as the giant oaks that rise in that rock-ribbed corner of Rhode Island, he rounds out his century in far superior physical condition to that usually given to the very few people who live to such a remarkably advanced age.

Mr. Blackmar suffers from rheumatism, but his general health is good, and he does his daily work in chopping wood, hoeing potatoes or corn, and doing other general and hard work about the farm. Last summer he assisted at the haymaking and expects to be able to do likewise next month.

Mr. Blackmar is a big man—about six feet tall, with a broad chest and a well-developed physique. He is not a bit of a rickety old man, but is in the prime of life, and his health is as good as that of a young man.

He is a native of the town of Foster, R. I., and has lived there all his life. He was born on June 12, 1812, and is now 100 years old.
